It was published and I'm suggesting this only because his name is Al. Visit this website for more info.

I think it was titled The Octagon House. They know every free food place in the city and how to make the best of looking helpless and cute. Some are sporty, with a good selection of stories about rugby and football, some have added facts and many are well illustrated.

A sophisticated story with an important message lies at the heart of this delightful Louise Lawrence book sounds like it might be the book I'm thinking of--I've ordered an old copy and will let you know once I review it. This book contains four chapters about the home life of Indians from various regions of the country, and eight chapters relating the adventures of specific Indian children.
