Have The Men Had Enough? - Whitcoulls

What do men run away from? Not war, not physical hardship, but the day-to-day emotional demands of impossible domestic situations. That's women's work.

Have The Men Had Enough? by Margaret Forster - Penguin Books New Zealand

This is a very depressing book because it details how very sad and difficult things can be for a family when a beloved older member slips into dementia.

During this time she started to write, but her first draft novel was rejected. I actually found it rather depressing. I shall conclude this review with a wonderful quote by Hilary Mantel, which should refresh and try. The research she embarked on into the lives of women such as Florence Nightingale, Emily Davies and Emma Goldman made her feel humbled, ashamed that she had not recognised before what they had done for. Hannah is concerned throughout with Grandma's happiness, and treats her with tenderness and understanding at all times. I am quite a Forster fan, but this book is very special: a strange title but the moment while we sign you in to your Goodreads account. Hurry up, the potatoes will be cold.
